

EGN 4624

High Stakes

Expectations for Course Reflection Paper Final Paper

- The final paper is a reflection of your major learnings this semester. Previously you have written short reflection papers on topics such as integrating personal values with engineering ethics, integrating creativity into an engineering work environment, and integrating leadership and ethics. These papers can be used in the development of this final paper; a reflective summary paper on the course. The paper is a personal reflection but addressed to the instructor answering the question, “How have the concepts of values, ethics, creativity and leadership affected your world and life view as you enter the workplace?”
- The main body of the paper should be no less than 5 typed pages and no more than 7 pages. If you choose to quote sources such as your text books make certain to use APA or other recognized style for the citations. Although you can use your previous writings this is not simply a cut and paste paper. It is an integrated paper that reflects on the entire course.
- The paper format is:
 - Title & author page
 - Abstract (1/2 page)
 - My “top 5” learnings from the course? (Use a bullet to identify the top learning followed by a brief statement of why this is a significant learning for you. Approximately 1 page)
 - The main body of the paper is a personal reflection but addressed to the instructor answering the question, “How have the concepts of values, ethics, creativity and leadership affected your world and life view as you enter the workplace?” (5 - 7 pages)